The Cathy Lynn Yorke-Slader Foundation Bursary is presented to a student who will be studying voice or clarinet at a post-secondary school institution. This scholarship honors Cathy Lynn Yorke-Slader, a past president of the OMEA and long-time music educator.

Amanda Jeffreys

Amanda Jeffreys lives in Sault Ste Marie, Ontario and has been involved in several co-curricular activities at Korah Collegiate and Vocational School including President of the Music Council, leading the Korahster Choir and Korah Concert Band. Amanda is planning on attending Algoma University to study voice and clarinet. Upon graduation from Algoma University, she plans to further her education and eventually open her own music school so that children can learn how to sing and play instruments affordably. She “believes that it is important that all children have a chance to experience music and to learn about it, so making music affordable for children seems like the best way possible.”
